“ Tyler was best friends with my brother. I’m the little sister of the whole group. I’ll never forget how much fun I had tagging along to hangout with Zach and Tyler, and the time I got to spend one on one with Tyler. He was always so supportive of everything I was doing. He would ask how school was going, how my current job “of the month”, as he’d refer, was going. When I needed a ride from work, back to work, and back home from work, Tyler dropped everything to do it for me. I will always think of him as my older brother, always introduce him that way. Everyone who knows me will know who Tyler is. Tyler, I finished the storyteller puzzle game we had played for hours together. It was something I hadn’t touched because I wanted to do it with you. I’ll never not hate how we didn’t get the time with you we all wanted, the time you deserved to have. I love you forever, Tyty. This isn’t “byeeeeeee”, this is see you later.

“ Im truly at a loss of words for this entire situation.. Ill be the first to admit we werent ever incredibly close, though i did consider you a friend. Spending my early highschool days often in the gamestore in town i always looked forward to seeing Tyler come downstairs with his brother so Id have the chance at talking to some people around my age. Which is a weird take but after being expelled he was one of the few that still kept in touch with me. Tyler was one of the few people who was accepting of me while in highschool, and always offered an ear and shoulder if ever needed. If you were to ever get to know him you'd know how much of a kind hearted gentle caring person tyler was. He really cared about everyone around him. The world's going to miss the goofy, nerdy, eccentric person that was and will always be Tyler. My heart goes out to thoes personally affected no words could ever the along with the pain i wish you all nothing but love nurting and healing. I am so sorry. Tyler you will be missed deeply and dearly rest in peace..

“ It's with a broken heart and soul that I say goodbye to my son Tyler. He was the sweetest, kindest man I ever met. He was a momma's boy and did whatever he could do to take care of me. He loved frogs, playing video games, anything that had to do with electronics, taking me on adventures and giving hugs. His hugs were the best. He did his best to help anyone in need. You can't tell it but, he was my smallest baby. He is greatly missed by those whose lives he touched. I love you sooo much Dragon aka Tyler. Your will always be my precious momma's boy.

“ *Heartbroken. But so thankful for having so many pictures and memories of all our times together. Im so glad you insisted I come see you , even though we had plans the next day. You even took off work early telling me to come. Being with your grandma from Ohio and your grandpa . We have the last picture of you. The last thing you did was have Grandpa give you all of his Dr appointments and put them in your phone. You gave me the biggest hug. You were nothing but loyal and caring to anyone who knew you. Even helping other people who never helped you back. You are in heaven now and I will see you there soon.
Love your grandma*
